

A Brief Insight into "Structured Deals"

In the current market conditions, it is rare that all of the funding needed to complete a corporate finance transaction can be attracted from a single source.

Increasingly, even relatively small amounts of money needs to be secured from a variety of finance providers:-

Managing the process of co-ordinating the interests, information requirements and due diligence requirements of all of these sources of finance can be challenging even to sector professionals (we call it "herding cats"), so it can be quite literally exasperating to the uninitiated.

So why not let the professionals help you to manage this process; we know the providers of finance that are in the market; we know what they are looking for; we know what they will need and we know what order to approach them to achieve the best likelihood of a successful outcome.
